

APPENDIX A
CAMP HOUSE RULES

[FOR ALL – LEADERS AND PARTICIPANTS]

We desire to have a God-centred, relational, enjoyable and trouble-free camp. We want to have a peaceful, respectful and safe environment for all. We expect camp participants and also those leading, hosting and serving to abide by the following rules:

1. All cell phones are to be used in a silent or vibrate mode. There should be no loud ringing during the camp, especially during the talks. Cell phones are to be used for electronic note-taking and if participants have electronic versions of the Bible; they are not to be used for listening to music, playing or texting during camp activities.
2. There is an expectation that there will be no smoking during the camp. No illegal substances will be brought and used during the camp.
3. No alcohol to be brought in and consumed during the camp and the accommodation premises.
4. All are expected to dress modestly for the duration of the camp.
5. All are expected to relate in an honourable and orderly manner. They are expected to relate as brothers and sisters in the Lord. The camp is not a venue to seek one to one boy-girl relationships. Pairing-off with those of the opposite sex should be avoided.
6. There is curfew implemented at 11pm – no one is allowed to go out after this time. In the past, curfew violators have been sent home.
7. All are expected to respect the need to sleep for themselves and by everyone else. We do not allow participants to stay up the whole night as it affects their ability to participate during the day activities. Organisers will turn off the lights at 12am at the latest. From midnight to 6am is strictly a time for sleep and silence for all participants.
8. Participants are expected to assist with any assigned duties during the camp to facilitate the good running of the camp.
9. Participants are expected to abide by other instructions by local organisers as they seem fit for the situation.

* Participants will need to agree to the above guidelines and house rules as they register and sign up for the youth camp. If participants do not agree with the guidelines and house rules, they will not be allowed to participate. Organisers of the camp hold the right to give the appropriate disciplinary measures to participants who are not abiding with the guidelines and house rules as stated above.*
